Personal letter

JULIA OLSSON

My name is Julia Olsson. I was born and raised in Kivik, a southern village in Sweden and moved to Lund in 2018 to study behavioural science at Lund University.

At my previous workplaces, my passion has always been about the people around me. Therefore, I chose the path of trying to understand human behaviour better, to be able to develop my passion for people. Besides my passion for human behaviour and development, I am also passionate about sports, music and nature. But most of all, where I want to spend most of my spare time and where I feel the happiest, is together with my family and friends.

Before I started my bachelor's degree at Lund University, I worked for a year to be able to travel in southeast Asia for about 3 months. This increased my interest in people in a broader perspective than before. To see new places and to get to know people from all over the world has truly been one of the most self-developing experiences for me.

My education includes 15 credits of pedagogy, 15 credits of psychology, 15 credits of sociology, 15 credits of scientific methods, 30 credits of social psychology, 15 credits of project management, 15 credits of conversation and interview techniques (psychology), and 30 credits of internship at Ingka Group (IKEA). My earlier work experiences are related to management, service, and People & Culture (HR). I have also studied a few extra courses besides my bachelor's degree, such as 7,5 credits of organizational theory (leadership and motivation), 5 credits of an orientation course in sustainable development, and 15 credits of a law introductory course.

Studying behavioral science has increased my analytical skills and given me broad competence in social interaction, conversation, interview techniques, communication, motivation, marketing, competence development, leadership, equality, diversity, and much more. We have frequently practiced working both independently and in groups.

Between September-December 2020 I had the great opportunity to be an intern at the Communication Business Partner team for People & Culture, within Group Communication at Ingka Group (IKEA). Working with strategic and operational communication has broadened my point of view of how to work with communication. I have really enjoyed this internship in many ways. It has truly been a fantastic opportunity for me to develop both personally and professionally. It has also helped me understand how to apply my theoretical knowledge and analytical skills while working operationally.

If you have any questions about my internship, please feel free to contact me - I'm happy to help!

Best regards, Julia.
